The night fashion arrives

Fashion Night, which for the last five years has been a reason to party and shop in cities across the globe, arrives next month Designers and stores downtown will participate

The City of Philadelphia and the Center City District announced yesterday that, for the first time, Philly will participate in Fashion's Night Out on Sept. 6. The event began in New York City three years ago as a collaboration between Vogue Magazine and the Council of Fashion Designers of America, and has since expanded to include 250 participating cities in more than 18 countries.

"It was designed to restore confidence in the creative economy and stimulate the growth of the retail industry in the midst of a great economic crisis," Mayor Michael Nutter said at a press conference yesterday afternoon. "Philadelphia is now able to show the world we are a city that's ready to assume its rightful place among the fashion capitals of the world. Whether it's New York or Paris or London or Milan, we are a city of creative ingenuity and entrepreneurship."

Philadelphia's Fashion Night Out will serve as the official preview event to The Philadelphia Collection, a weeklong series that kicks off Sept. 13 and encompasses nearly 75 fashion events, from large-scale runway presentations to trunk shows and panel discussions.

Random Acts of Fashion, a social media-driven collection of interactive style events, will also make a return with events such as "Ambush Makeovers" and "Remote Red Carpet," in which citizens will have the opportunity to pose in front of a Philadelphia Collection step and repeat backdrop, which will make surprise appearances throughout the city.

"The community building impact of The Philadelphia Collection on our fashion industry led to growing consumer awareness of our creative fashion community and an increased consumer awareness brought new shoppers into the store," City Rep. Melanie Johnson said while reviewing the progress the event has made since it was founded in 2010. "And that's what it's about, highlighting what we have here in Philadelphia."

Philly accolades

September 2010. The Philadelphia Collection first launched as a partnership between the Office of the City Representative, the Center City District and the Philadelphia Retail and Marketing Alliance.

December 2010. Forbes.com named Philadelphia one of the 10 best shopping cities in America.

October 2011. Travel + Leisure, in its annual online "America's Favorite Cities" reader survey, ranked Philadelphia as No.1 for culture, up from No. 30 in 2010.

Fall 2011. British fashion retailers Jack Wills, Dr. Marten and Barbour opened locations on Walnut Street, along with Free People and Athleta. Brooks Brothers and Club Monaco renovated their Philadelphia stores and Swarovski debuted a second Center City location. Intermix is slated to open this coming fall.

June 2011. Shermans Travel Magazine placed Philadelphia on an international list of the top 10 shopping cities on the rise.

March 2012. Women's Wear Daily profiled Philadelphia's Macy's fashion incubator, resulting in the first wholesale order for one of the designers.

February 2012. Lucky Magazine named Philadelphia one of the 25 best cities for shopping in the U.S.

Fashion incubator put Philly on the map

Macy's fashion incubator, which opened March 1, has been a "smashing success," according to Michelle Shannon of the Philadelphia Retail Marketing Alliance.

"As we had hoped, the Philadelphia fashion incubator has indeed become a galvanizing force for this community," she said. "The once-divided fashion community has rallied around this program and, as a result, new partnerships, alliances and friendships have been forged."

She said that the five designers-in-residence have received $500,000 in free publicity, including an article in Women's Wear Daily that led to the first wholesale order being placed for one of the labels.

Shannon said that meetings with Joan Shepp, Nicole Miller, the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the founder of New York fashion week have also resulted in direct sales. METRO/AW

Second big city pipe bursts, floods Kensington this time

PHOTOS BY RIKARD LARMA/METRO

- Water main, 48 inches in diameter, floods second neighborhood in 11 days
- Same size as main that caused massive rupture at 21st and Bainbridge

Yet another water main break caused massive flooding yesterday, this time at the intersection of Front and Tioga streets in Kensington.

Residents said water started pouring from the ground in the morning. "I woke up and it was maybe 7:30," Cristal LaTorre said. "I saw already everything was floating, like a river. I thought it was the beginning of a tsunami."

Paul Rivera, who works at the intersection, where a sizable sinkhole had opened by yesterday afternoon, recounted the story of a coworker who witnessed the break. "He saw a stream of water shoot up, then it bubbled like a balloon and burst open," he said.

Cleanup crews used backhoes to scoop debris from the street yesterday afternoon as far as half a mile away from the break. "They're still sweeping up dirt," LaTorre said. "The water brought trash blocks and blocks away." Front Street was closed off to traffic to Allegheny Avenue, about four blocks south of the intersection.

Because the rupture was located near the top of a hill, it didn't pool as deep as the main that burst at 21st and Bainbridge streets 11 days ago, but the water's reach was more extensive. Residents living farther downhill, near Westmoreland Street, reported up to four feet of water in their basements.

Ron Waite, who owns a hardware store at Front and Tioga streets, said his utilities weren't affected and his store suffered no damage, but he was dealt a blow in the form of lost profit. "Usually by now, we've had 30 to 40 people in the store," he said this afternoon. "I think we've had four or five."

City: Blame the heat and feds

Hours before the city's Water Department was able to stop the flow of water from the burst pipe.

The pipe is the third main to burst in less than two weeks. On Sunday, July 22, a 48-inch main ruptured at 21st and Bainbridge streets in Graduate Hospital, opening a mammoth sinkhole at the intersection that is still being repaired.

A week later, a smaller, eight-inch main broke around Willits and Ashton roads in Northeast Philadelphia.

Water Commissioner Howard Neukrug said earlier this week a combination of temperature-related stress, comparatively low citizen-paid water rates and a lack of federal infrastructure funding is to blame, though the direct cause of each break has yet to be determined. METRO/AW

Voter ID law leaves Pa. official confused

Pennsylvania anticipated that fewer voters wouldn't have the identification required under a new law to cast a ballot than state employees later estimated, an official said.

Secretary of State Carol Aichele, testifying yesterday at a trial in which the voting law is being challenged, said the state had expected 100,000 people to lack the proper ID. Another state official testified July 30 that the number might be more than 1 million. Aichele's department oversees the voting process in the state.

Aichele, while disputing the higher estimate, said that if it's correct, the state has a lot of work to do.

"We think the number is substantially less," Aichele said. "We planned on less."

Pennsylvania is one of nine states that passed strict laws requiring a photo ID to vote. Backed by Gov. Tom Corbett, a Republican, the state's law requires voters to have a driver's license or another ID issued by the state's Department of Transportation, a state ID or an acceptable alternative such as a military ID, to cast a ballot in the presidential election.

▶ Aichele

"I don't know what the law says."
AICHELE

More than 889,000 names on voter registration lists couldn't be matched to Pennsylvania transportation department records. David Burgess, deputy secretary for planning and service delivery at the Department of State, testified Monday. Another 574,630 voters had expired PennDOT identification, Burgess said.

Aichele testified yesterday that the staff employee who compiled an initial projection showing about 759,000 people without either a driver's license or alternative state ID did so in less than 24 hours because she was told to come up with a number.

Aichele said she disagreed with the staffer's assertion that the number was too low. Aichele later conceded that the state doesn't know how many registered voters are out there without PennDOT identification.

Closing arguments in the weeklong case are scheduled for today. BLOOMBERG

Princeton named US top university

NEW YORK. Princeton scores top marks and edged past Williams College in Massachusetts and California's Stanford University in a new ranking of the top colleges in the United States released yesterday.

The New Jersey university topped the Forbes list, which assessed U.S. colleges based on their graduation rates, student outcomes and satisfaction, low levels of debt and post-graduate success.

"Princeton does well across the board," said Michael Noer, Forbes executive editor.

With about 5,200 undergraduates and an annual total cost of $53,934, Princeton had the highest freshman to sophomore retention rates. Noer said the school also did well in the prominence of its alumni. REUTERS

Long lines form in show of support for Chick-fil-A

ALEX WONG/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Same-sex couples around the country plan a kiss-in at Chick-fil-A restaurants on Friday.

Two former Republican U.S. presidential candidates encouraged people to eat at Chick-fil-A yesterday to show support for the chain restaurant as it weathers criticism for its president's public opposition to gay marriage.

Business was so brisk at one Chick-fil-A location in the company's corporate hometown of Atlanta that two employees directed traffic in the parking lot.

Dubbing the effort "Chick-fil-A Appreciation Day," conservative former candidates Mike Huckabee and Rick Santorum said supporters would send a message about "traditional values" by eating a meal at one of the privately owned chain's more than 1,600 locations.

"The goal is simple: Let's affirm a business that operates on Christian principles and whose executives are willing to take a stand for the Godly values we espouse by simply showing up and eating at Chick-fil-A," Huckabee, a former Arkansas governor and current Fox News Channel personality, said on his website.

Chick-fil-A, known for chicken sandwiches and waffle fries — and for being closed on Sundays — came under fire after its president, Dan Cathy, told an online religious newspaper that he supports "the biblical definition of the family unit" and that supporters of gay marriage were "arrogant."

Gay marriage supporters have responded by calling for a boycott of the chain and seeking to block new Chick-fil-A outlets from opening.

Customers at a busy Atlanta location held varying views on gay marriage, but most said they visited the chain on Wednesday simply because they like the food. REUTERS

"Miracle Fat Burner In A Bottle" - Dr. Oz

Science Uncovers Fat Burning Effect In Raspberry Ketones

In recent studies, scientists have found a link between Raspberry Ketones and weight loss. The ketones are the primary compound for the aroma in the widely loved fruit. By increasing the body's level of adiponectin and norepinephrine, it raises the body's metabolism causing significant fat loss.

Zimmerman judge refuses to step down

GETTY IMAGES

ORLANDO, FLA. A Florida judge yesterday rejected a motion asking him to step down from the murder trial of George Zimmerman.

Zimmerman's lawyer, Mark O'Mara, in a motion filed July 13 asking the judge to step down, accused Judge Kenneth Lester of bias, citing what he called "gratuitous" and "disparaging remarks" Lester made in a July 5 ruling raising Zimmerman's bond from $150,000 to $1 million.

The ruling followed a bond hearing held after prosecutors accused Zimmerman and his wife Shellie, who has been charged with perjury, of lying to the court about their finances.

In his order dismissing the motion for him to recuse himself, Lester wrote that, by law, he must assume O'Mara's allegations were true.

"The court is not permitted to deny the allegations supporting the motion as untrue, reject them as unfounded or comment upon them at all," Lester wrote in his order. REUTERS

Study: Income disparity increasing in US cities

MIKE EHRMANN/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Dallas is among the big metropolitan areas showing the greatest segregation of neighborhoods by income.

U.S. cities have become increasingly segregated by income since 1980, with the greatest divide found in fast-growing Texas metropolitan areas, the Pew Research Center reported yesterday.

This rising segregation is seen in 27 of the 30 biggest metropolitan areas and stems from the long-term increase in U.S. income inequality, Pew said in its study of Census data.

Residential segregation by income is less widespread than segregation by race, even though U.S. black-white segregation has been falling for decades, the report said.

76%

The share of neighborhoods that are middle class fell to 76 percent in 2010 from 85 percent in 1980.

The analysis shows that 28 percent of lower-income households in 2010 were in a mostly lower-income neighborhood, up from 23 percent in 1980.

Eighteen percent of upper-income households were in a majority upper-income Census tract, twice the level in 1980.

Rising income inequality "has led to a shrinkage in the share of neighborhoods across the United States that are predominantly middle-class or mixed income," wrote Paul Taylor and Richard Fry, the report's authors.

The share of neighborhoods that are middle-class fell to 76 percent in 2010 from 85 percent in 1980.

Among the 30 biggest metropolitan areas, San Antonio, Houston and Dallas show the greatest segregation of neighborhoods by income, according to the report.

The least segregation was seen in Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn.; Portland, Ore.; and Orlando, Fla.

Most of the metropolitan areas showing the greatest increase in segregation have seen significant population growth as people moved in to the area.

For example, Houston, Dallas and San Antonio are among the fastest-growing U.S. cities, with growth partly fueled by low-wage immigrants moving in, along with better-paid high-skill workers and well-off retirees. REUTERS

Obama ahead in three key states, poll shows

WASHINGTON. President Barack Obama has the edge over Mitt Romney in three key battleground states in large part because voters find him more likable than the Republican challenger, a poll released on yesterday found.

Quinnipiac University's survey of more than 3,500 likely voters in the Nov. 6 election found Obama ahead by 11 percentage points in Pennsylvania (53 to 42 percent), and 6 percentage points in both Ohio (50 to 44 percent) and Florida (51 to 45 percent). Obama won all three states in the 2008 presidential election.

At least 50 percent of respondents in the three states expressed a "favorable" opinion of Obama compared to about 40 percent for Romney, according to the poll, which has a margin of error of about plus or minus 2.9 percentage points. REUTERS

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

RPatz crashing with Witherspoon

Loyal Word readers may have noticed that Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart have been absent from our pages for two full days. But all good things, of course, must come to an end.

After moving out of the Los Angeles mansion he was sharing with Stewart, Pattinson is shacking up at friend and "Water for Elephants" co-star Reese Witherspoon's super sweet California ranch, reports Us Weekly. Pattinson remains "inconsolable" about Stewart's affair with Rupert Sanders and is more of a "total mess" than usual, sources say.

As for Kristen, she's found support with "Panic Room" co-star Jodie Foster. "As soon as she heard the news, Jodie contacted Kristen," a source tells RadarOnline. "Jodie told Kristen to take no notice of the media bashing and said if she wanted to cry her heart out to her, she's always available."

▶ You just know she has fluffy towels in her guest room.

Reese Witherspoon's ranch versus Jodie Foster's shoulder: We're going to have to hand this round to Pattinson.

Pattinson's got a wingman

Although he's cut off contact with Stewart, Pattinson did make one thing clear about the terms of their split: He wants full custody of their dog, a rescue named Bear.

"Rob was so hurt by Kristen's actions he decided that he wants the dog to help him get over what happened," a source tells RadarOnline.

And yes Kristen, by "get over" he means "bed the one girl in L.A. who isn't impressed by his car." Godspeed.

Jason Segel walking out on 'Mother'?

Rumors have been swirling that Jason Segel is leaving "How I Met Your Mother" after this season, despite protests from his rep that future seasons haven't even been discussed yet. (Which, Mr. Rep, isn't really a good way to extinguish rumors.)

"Jason and Alyson [Hannigan] are the two least likely to want to do a Season 9. It would take a lot of money to keep them. A lot," a source connected with the show tells E! Online.

Segel's an A-lister at this point, but Hannigan? Even the rumor that she has better things to do is sitcom poison.

Lindsay Lohan has demands

In her latest film, "The Canyons," Lindsay Lohan strips down for a sex scene with her co-star, adult film actor/pop culture curiosity James Deen. (Never heard of him? Ask your girlfriend.)

▶ James Deen is used to creepy camera men.

Lohan agreed to go topless under one condition, reports TMZ: The film crew had to do the same during the scene, resulting in 10 cameramen in their underwear.

Talking points

And here we assumed that we just missed the invite, Biel

Jessica Biel and Justin Timberlake probably aren't getting married soon, if Biel's level of preparation for the big day is any indication. The actress says she's prepared "almost nothing" for her wedding. "I'm just being engaged. I do feel like there is a lot of time and nothing needs to be rushed," she says, according to the Chicago Sun-Times. "Everyone tells me that being engaged is the really special moment. Not that it gets bad when you're married, but being engaged is just absolutely amazing. You're in this romantic, ahhh, breathless moment that I'm just trying to extend as long as possible."

You're on your own this time, Russell

Russell Brand is coming under fire for recent comments he made about whether he'd have Sarah Palin as a guest on his new show, "Brand X." The comedian told critics at the TCA press tour that he would — but not to talk politics. "I'd go straight to the subtext," Brand said. "People want to f— her, don't they? That's why they tolerate the other stuff. OK, that is a mad thing to say about seeing Russia out your window — but the d— don't lie." The remarks have caused an uproar, including a scolding by women's right activist Sandra Fluke, who posted to Twitter: "Female politicians deserve to be judged on merits of their ideas only."

"New Girl" star and Emmy nominee Max Greenfield has a new pen pal: Gwyneth Paltrow. "We e-mail all the time, but I've never met her," Greenfield tells Us Weekly, explaining that he and Paltrow became virtually acquainted when he wrote for her site, Goop. "I e-mailed her recently and said, 'Hey, Gwyneth, what if my next piece for Goop was me getting ready for the Emmys?' She was like, 'Done!'"

Pixie cuts are the great equalizer. No matter how rich you are, how beautiful you are or how razor-sharp your cheekbones are, there's no guarantee they'll work.

1. As far as college hair experiments go, Emma Watson's wasn't a total disaster — but you'll notice she grew it back pretty quickly.

2. The pixie cut tends to work when you do, in fact, look like a pixie: Natalie Portman tried out the 'do circa 2006, and we were almost buying it — almost.

3. A lot of people look not quite terrible in a pixie. Michelle Williams is one of the very rare few who actually looks great.

4. Victoria Beckham worked the choppy bob, but we were kind of afraid of her in this super-cropped cut.

5. Audrey Tautou occasionally does an adorable messy riff on the pixie. But as she's very small and very French, she's pretty much cheating.

6. Anne Hathaway is obviously stunning. But it was a little more obvious before she chopped her long locks off for her role in the upcoming film "Les Miserables."

7. Halle Berry owns the pixie cut, for very obvious reasons.

From the art house to Philly audiences

Inaugural BlackStar Festival features films from around the world about people of African descent ◗ What to catch on screens this weekend

The BlackStar Film Festival might seem to have a very focused goal: to showcase work by and about people of African descent. While curating the first annual festival, however, artistic director Maori Karmael Holmes learned firsthand how wide-ranging that focus really is.

"There is no singular representation of blackness," Holmes says. "There's a lot of people and a lot of different cultures and religious experiences and relationship experiences."

Holmes didn't initially plan for such a big project when she booked a couple of dates at International House to screen recent African films. But the more films she saw, the more she realized how much quality work simply wasn't appearing on local screens.

"A lot of independent film doesn't make it to the audience that it's actually intended for," she says. "It lives in this high art space and doesn't make it to the people because it doesn't make it to the theater. So I was interested in creating a space where people could come and see this work."

BLACKSTAR FILM FESTIVAL

▶ "Brooklyn Boheme" screens tonight at 6:30 p.m. at the African American Museum.

"A lot of independent film doesn't make it to the audience that it's actually intended for. It lives in this high art space and doesn't make it to the people." HOLMES

Highlights of the four-day festival include Byron Hurt's "Soul Food Junkies," a PBS documentary about soul food; "Brooklyn Boheme," about the artistic community that included Spike Lee, Chris Rock and Branford Marsalis; and a discussion with Ava DuVernay, who became the first African-American woman to win best director at Sundance this year. She'll offer an excerpt from "Middle of Nowhere," which netted her the prize, and it will be the first glimpse the East Coast has gotten of the film.

▶ Colin Farrell is a man on the run.

What you'll want to see this weekend

1 'Total Recall' This mind-bending sci-fi thriller stars Colin Farrell as lowly factory worker Douglas Quaid, who uses Rekall — a company that alters dreams to make them reality — in order to escape his mundane life. However, the procedure malfunctions and Quaid questions what is real and what is illusion as the police chase him down.

2 'Diary of a Wimpy Kid: Dog Days' In the third movie based on Jeff Kinney's wildly popular books of the same name, Zachary Gordon reprises his role as Greg Heffley.

3 'The Watch' This comedy starts out with a simple enough premise: A group of bored, suburban dads band together to form a neighborhood watch group. But then, an alien invasion forces them to go from protecting the neighborhood to protecting the world.

4 'Step Up Revolution' The next installment in the "Step Up" series places Emily — the daughter of a wealthy businessman — in the heart of Miami, where she falls in love with a fellow dancer. Their harmony, however, is disturbed by Emily's father, who wants to develop the historic neighborhood.

5 'The Dark Knight Rises' In the finale to Christopher Nolan's trilogy, leading actor Christian Bale once again plays the stone-cold, shadowy figure known as Batman. This time, however, Bruce Wayne has exiled himself from his past as a hero. METRO

Showtime at TCA press tour: Reinvention, with accolades

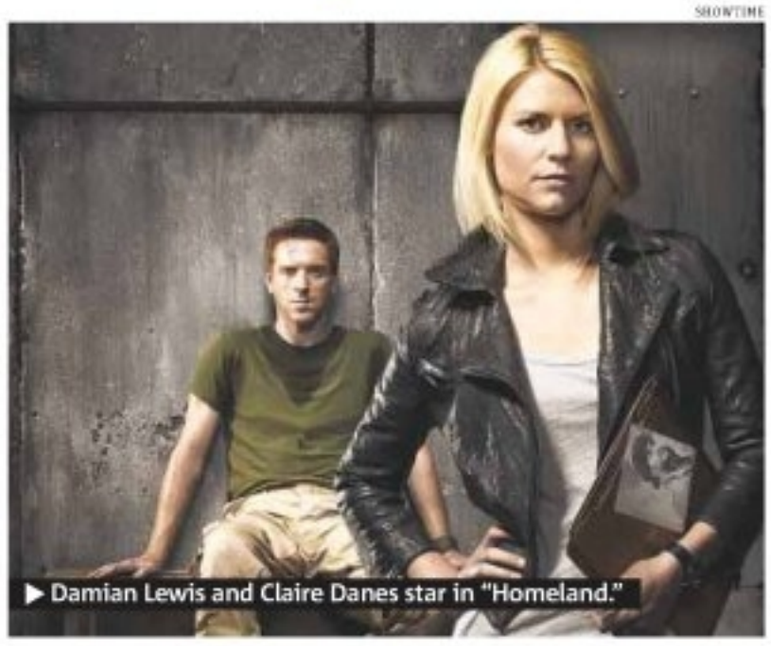
SHOWTIME



▶ Damian Lewis and Claire Danes star in "Homeland."

Showtime is having a "transformative" year, the network's president of entertainment, David Nevins, told reporters gathered at the Television Critics Association press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., on Monday. As the channel prepares to say goodbye to "Weeds," the edgy sitcom that put Showtime on the map for scripted programming on Sept. 16, it has also borne the gripping political drama "Homeland," which, in its first season, won two TCA awards (for Outstanding New Program and Individual Achievement in Drama, given to star Claire Danes), has been nominated for several Emmys, and touched off a national pop culture conversation.

Who is watching Showtime today? Well, even President Obama is a "Homeland" fan. Star Damian Lewis told critics he was invited to a state dinner when British Prime Minister David Cameron was visiting the White House, and, surprised that he was even on the president's radar, asked Obama when the leader of the free world managed to find any downtime to watch TV.

"He said, 'Saturday afternoons, Michelle and the two girls, they go play tennis,'" Lewis relayed. "'I go into the Oval Office. I pretend I'm going to work, and I switch on 'Homeland.'"

Other Showtime must-sees:

- The network will premiere a number of documentaries next year under the new banner "Closeup." The first film, "The World According to Dick Cheney," by R.J. Cutler, takes an unprecedented look at the former vice president. Director Antoine Fuqua examines the life and career of rap legend Suge Knight. "Richard Pryor: Omit the Logic" is directed by Emmy-winner Marina Zenovich. And Brett Ratner will direct a documentary on music mogul Tommy Mottola.
- Oliver Stone's "Untold History of the United States," a 10-part series narrated by Stone himself, premieres Nov. 12.
- The intimate interview series "Inside Comedy" returns this fall with 10 episodes, featuring host David Steinberg sitting down with comedians Ben Stiller, Tina Fey, Judd Apatow, Will Ferrell and Albert Brooks, among others.

So you think you've had some bad dates?

They may be nothing compared to what author Eddie Campbell shares with you about his '44 Horrible Dates'

The Car Squatter, the Gay Pirate, the Cross-Eyed Magician, the Sleeping Pill — are these characters all part of a bad "Saturday Night Live" sketch? No. These are the nicknames that belong to some of the worst men author Eddie Campbell has ever dated. The Los Angeles native has had so many terrible and extreme experiences that he's recently compiled them into a book: "44 Horrible Dates."

Campbell's hilarious look at dating in L.A. is rife with oddballs — from the guy who showed up to a date hopped up on cocaine to the one who wanted to put some groceries to use in the bedroom. Is Campbell a magnet for crazy? Given reader response to his memoirs, he doesn't think so.

"You can be the college-educated person, have a great life, love your family — all that stuff can be in place, and you can still meet a—holes," Campbell says. "I know so many gorgeous, beautiful, smart women who keep just meeting d— after d— after d—."

"I mean, the cover's cute, but there's nothing cute going on on the inside."

CAMPBELL, ON THE EXCRUCIATING DETAILS OF EACH OF THE 44 DATES IN HIS BOOK

But he says all those terrible dates have helped him to avoid future disasters.

"It's a good lesson for everyone because when you're younger, you're a lot less judgmental about who you might go on a date with," says Campbell. "As you get older, and you're still single, you start breaking down what you're willing to put up with. It's not being overly picky, but it's knowing what's right for you."

Campbell stresses that one of the best ways to avoid the pitfalls he's experienced with say, Nightmare on Vegan Street, is to take some time to evaluate your potential date before agreeing to spend time with them.

"Talk longer on the phone, get out a few questions," Campbell says. "I've actually been on dates where you're so bored you're thinking about separating your darks from your whites and what you're doing for the next day. Don't place yourself in that scenario."

Underemployment also dire issue

Policymakers shouldn't forget that "underemployment" is also a problem in America. Ignoring it only makes things worse for the millions of Americans who are only one paycheck or medical mishap away from homelessness and despair. Many people in "working poor" jobs are capable of so much more if given the opportunities to grow, and such incentives can come from the right, left, center — frankly, I don't care as long as they get a real "chance" at making the American Dream a reality and not a pipe dream. Let's give them something better than an empty wallet and a stress-induced stroke retirement. They and America deserve better!

ROBERT GORMAN, VIA E-MAIL

Romney lackluster decision-maker

Recent polling suggested that while Obama was more likeable, Mitt Romney is king when it comes to decision-making. If Romney were president the past four years, he would have told the auto industry to drop dead when it came to bailouts, which would have led to bankruptcies and a job bloodletting.

Mitt felt it a waste of money to get Sammy Bin Laden, even though he was surfing the Web to plot another terrorist attack. Now we have rumors of Mitt's reluctance to release 10 years of tax returns. If I were deciding to run for president, I would've made sure I paid something in taxes for fear of it biting me later on, when my goal is to commiserate with the working class for their vote. Decision-making like this is not what I want from a man wishing to lead this country.

DAVID DIBELLO, VIA E-MAIL

More to presidency than business sense

I agree with Metro reader John McLaughlin. Mitt Romney is a very smart, successful, wealthy businessman, which is an excellent quality for a CEO. However, suggesting Romney is most qualified to be president of the United States solely on the basis of his business success is analogous with suggesting that a successful sports coach is qualified to be commander of NATO. The U.S. government is not a business and cannot be run like one. If Mitt Romney wants to sell himself to the rest of us, perhaps he should first realize that the U.S. Congress and the U.S. Supreme Court are not a rubber-stamp board of directors and U.S. citizens are not shareholders.

LARRY D. FOWLER, VIA E-MAIL

Chick-fil-A flap very overblown

Has this country gone completely insane? Mayors of major cities telling a legitimate business that it should stay away from their city because of the beliefs of the head guy running it? And to make it worse ... ON TWITTER?! There is no reason Chick-fil-A should be blown up on the news and by politicians because of someone's ability and freedom to think as he likes. Why don't all the people ridiculously "defending" gay rights stop buying gas? I'm sure Saudi Arabia has an anti-homosexual stance.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. When you see something that is being mismanaged and you know you can do a better job with it, don't hesitate to step in and take on the necessary leadership.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Your ambitious intentions can be gratified when you do what needs doing without calling any attention to yourself. But it would be counterproductive if you appear self-serving.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. For unknown reasons, you could be extremely fortunate when dealing with intangible things. Conversely, the same would not be true if you switch to handling concrete affairs.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Don't hesitate to speak up if there is something owed you that you have yet to collect. Your probabilities for repayment are better than usual.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. It isn't likely that you'll feel comfortable being a follower, and there is no reason why you should. You have excellent leadership qualities, so use them without waiting to be asked.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Joint ventures will work wonderfully at this point in time, but only if you can make a contribution, either mentally or materially, that could help advance an endeavor.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Finding some time to spend with an old friend will do much for your own feelings of well-being. Make some space on your calendar.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Showing how capable you are of handling a serious development will win you the admiration of your peers. It'll give others plenty of reasons to say nice things about you.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. You can be instrumental in teaching a friend how to look for the positive things in life instead of seeing only the negative.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. By following your instincts, you should be able to manage your personal affairs in ways that will achieve the type of results you'd like to have. Don't leave things up to chance.

Business feeling small

For the gold

CASSANDRA GARRISON
CASSANDRA.GARRISON@METRO.US

At lunch hour, the award-winning Masala curry house sits empty. In fact, most of the 60 eateries on London's historic Brick Lane, a typically popular tourist attraction, are ghost towns.

It's the same story for countless businesses across the U.K. that are unlucky enough to be located some distance from Olympic Park. The hope had been an economic boom of epic proportions brought to London by the 2012 Olympics, but the effect has yet to be felt, according to some business owners.

"We are still waiting," Masala's owner, Guljar Khan, told Metro. His curry's awards are proudly displayed on the front of the restaurant, but they've done little to attract crowds, even though curry has arguably replaced fish and chips as Britain's national dish. In fact, sales are worse this summer than last summer.

"Athens had the same problem eight years ago, and I don't think they picked up, but we are hoping we can get more customers in the doors here," he said.

More than £11 billion (about $17 billion) was invested to improve the city's transportation, adding hotel rooms and building new retail spaces before an estimated 2.2 million visitors arrived, according to a report by Visit London. With that investment came looming warnings for locals to steer clear of public transportation, brace for nightmarish traffic and work from home — or get out of London all together.

Meanwhile, those 2.2 million visitors who have brought with them money to spend in London are typically lingering near Olympic Park. The Westfield shopping center attached to the Stratford tube station, where spectators exit for the park, is packed with tourists at any given time — a stark contrast for small businesses across London.

"We have two weeks of the games and business is probably a little bit quieter than expected," Robert Williams, spokesman for the London borough of Tower Hamlets, told Metro. "I'm not personally convinced that talk of the legacy of £19 million boost to the economy was ever entirely accurate, but I don't think it should be measured in two weeks."

Visiting Britain

London has enlisted the help of 70,000 volunteers, stationed at street corners and outside tube stations, offering directions, maps and suggestions. Those extra touches have proven key among American visitors who spoke with Metro.

▶ "The organization has been the best we've ever seen and this is our eighth Olympics," Paul Schultz, who is here from Houston with his wife, told Metro.

▶ "I've never seen lines so short and people so friendly, Schultz said. "I can't imagine any American who can afford to come here not making the trip."

5 Tour de France winner Bradley Wiggins took gold in cycling's men's time trial for the home country.

Three events to catch today:

▶ The signature battle of the swimming events will be held between Ryan Lochte and Michael Phelps in the 200-meter individual medley. They should both get medals, but can Phelps outswim the man who beat him in the 400-meter IM? You know Phelps would like his 20th medal to be gold.

▶ There may be no bigger favorite in any swimming event than American Rebecca Soni in the 200-meter breaststroke. She set a new world record in the semifinals.

▶ American Khatuna Lorig, who trained Jennifer Lawrence for "The Hunger Games," is one of 16 competitors left in the women's archery competition. The gold medal will be decided this afternoon.

Flyers extend Laviolette, will prepare as normal despite threat of lockout

Orange and Black rewards coach with two-year deal ◗ Lavs on bench through 2014-15 ◗ Says preparations won't change if season is delayed

There may not be a season, but the Flyers will be in good hands through 2014-15.

The Flyers announced yesterday that they had inked coach Peter Laviolette to a two-year contract extension. He had one year remaining on his current deal.

"Peter and I have a strong relationship," said GM Paul Holmgren. "There was never a question that this wasn't going to get done. I am very happy to have it done."

But with the NHL's collective bargaining agreement set to expire Sept. 15, there is no guarantee there will be a 2012-13 season. In fact, all indications point to a shortened season, similar to what happened in the NBA. Even with the extreme uncertainty hanging over his head, Laviolette is conducting business as usual.

"We will go about it as normal," the coach said. "Hopefully we start and move forward as planned, but if we don't, I guess it gets delayed and you move forward when they say move forward."

Laviolette expressed no concern about the team's perceived lack of depth on the blue line. Last week, they missed out on an opportunity to lure stud defenseman Shea Weber away from Nashville.

"I feel good about the players that we have under contract and moving forward," Laviolette said. "Our team moved forward without Shea [Weber] last year. We dealt with certain injuries and things that I think our club had to overcome."

The Flyers are scheduled to start the preseason Sept. 25, when they host Chicago. They'll drop the puck for real Oct. 11 against Boston at the Wells Fargo Center. METRO

▶ Laviolette led the Flyers all the way to the Stanley Cup Finals in his first season on the bench. He has 366 career NHL wins.

122

Total wins for Laviolette in his two-plus seasons guiding the Flyers, which is nine better than the 113 wins Fred Shero had in his first three years. (Shero won two Cups here — 1974 and 1975.)

NFL news

Bad for Best

Jahvid Best last sustained a concussion in October of 2011. So the fact that he still hasn't been medically cleared is very concerning. The Lions are preparing Kevin Smith to be their starting running back and may have to scour the free agent market soon.

CLUES FROM TRAINING CAMP

There's a mountain of information coming out of training camp. Finding the right nuggets can make all the difference on draft day.

Even though Week 1 is still a month away, we're getting an early look at depth charts and talent levels of young players. Some items to note:

The new Law Firm

The most impressive runner at Patriots camp has been Stevan Ridley. Similar to BenJarvus Green-Ellis, Ridley is a power back that has a lock on goal-line and clock-killing work. BJGE rode that role to 1,675 yards and 24 scores over the last two years. Ridley is much more talented.

Martin on a roll

Any talk that Doug Martin would lose snaps to LeGarrette Blount has been squashed. Martin is showing why the Bucs traded up in the first round to draft him, drawing comparisons to Ray Rice as a three-down and goal-line back. Martin projects to push for 300 touches as a rookie.

Fresh corn on Cobb

The Packers have the most explosive passing game in the NFL. So even though Greg Jennings and Jordy Nelson are locked in as the starting wideouts, there's room for one more to emerge. That man will be Randall Cobb, who is running circles around Donald Driver and James Jones at Packers camp. Cobb is well worth a flier.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Stevan Ridley is leading the battle in the Patriots' backfield.

Frank Gore

RB, 49ers
Gore lacks explosion at age 29. He's not a part of the passing game and will lose carries to Kendall Hunter and LaMichael James.

Philip Rivers

QB, Chargers
Rivers lost his best receiver in Vincent Jackson and is also showing signs of declining arm strength. His best days are behind him.

Michael Turner

RB, Falcons
The Falcons are developing a pass-first philosophy that will feature no-huddle and screens. The aging, hefty Turner isn't a part of that.

Top MLB pickups

1 Greg Holland, RP, KC — Jonathan Broxton was traded to Cincy, leaving Holland as the unquestioned closer. He has 56 strikeouts in just 39 2/3 innings.

2 Domonic Brown, OF, PHL — With Hunter Pence and Shane Victorino gone, Brown is going to play every day. There's some post-hype appeal with the former No. 1 prospect.

3 Kris Medlen, SP, ATL — Tommy Hanson is heading to the DL, leaving a spot in the rotation for Medlen. He has a sparkling 2.03 ERA on the season.

Cole, Jenkins miss time with injuries

Two more Eagles joined the walking wounded yesterday.

Defensive end Trent Cole is out "anywhere from a day to a week" with a shoulder problem, while defensive tackle Cullen Jenkins left practice with a hamstring injury. They join Jason Babin (calf) who is expected to miss about three weeks.

Brandon Graham, Darryl Tapp, Phillip Hunt and rookie Vinny Curry will see extended snaps as the trio rehabs and rests. For Tapp, it could be a chance to snag a coveted roster spot.

"Reps are reps," he said. "No matter who it is, you have to go out there and put your best foot forward. The eye in the sky never lies." MIKE GREGER
